

Once we're hooked on a sin, our values are turned upside down. Evil becomes our most urgent "good," our deepest longing; good stands as an "evil" because it threatens to keep us from satisfying our illicit desires. At that point, repentance becomes almost impossible, because repentance is, by definition, a turning away from evil and toward the good; but, by now, the sinner has thoroughly redefined both good and evil.

The pre-Christmas fast "Pylypivka" is a journey to change our lives. Time to think about where we are at...
